

New and radical spatial planning for systemic change in cities

An exploration of priorities and action in different parts of the MENA Region to use spatial planning to deliver radical and systemic change in cities and urban areas and improve sustainability and resilience in the face of the climate emergency.

A call for collaboration from the International Society of Cities and Regional Planning to governments at all levels, the public and to all professions engaged in Cities, Regions and the Built Environment.

AGENDA

1. Introductions – Martina Juvara, panel chair and ISOCARP focal point for climate change
2. Why comprehensive change in urban systems and lifestyles is needed – Dushko Bogunovich, ISOCARP Scientific Committee
3. Perspectives and priorities: short presentations from different parts of the MENA Region Huda Shaka, Sustainable Development Advisor, The Green Urbanista, UAE
Nasim Iranmanesh, Municipality of Tehran, Iran
Khalid El Adli, Partner EAG Consulting, Professor Cairo University, Egypt
Ali A. Alraouf, Professor Urban Planning Department Doha, Qatar
Firas Mourtada, President, Urban Planners Association, Le Consultant, Lecturer, Beirut, Lebanon
TBC, Ministry of Housing and Urban Planning, Oman
4. Panel discussion with online public engagement – Dushko Bogunovich and Martina Juvara as challengers

Links

Zoom event:

<https://uso2web.zoom.us/j/83118818667>

For interactive participation:

www.pollev.com/urbansilence996

